

Call for PhDs

At DDC – Danish Design Center, we're honored to participate in the ambitious European project, CoDesign4Transitions (The Sustainable Transitions through Democratic Design Doctoral Network).

The call for applications is now open. We'll host some of the doctoral candidates at the beginning of 2025.

About the program

CoDesign4Transitions offers 13 Ph.D. positions at the intersection of co-design, design for sustainability, service and systems design, democratic innovation, and climate transitions.

Successful applicants will be onboarded between May and August 2024, ready to start their projects by September 2024 at the latest. They will be part of a unique doctoral training program offering:

Excellent employment conditions at one of eight recruiting partners
Two secondments, including one in another country
Extensive and varied engagement and training across a network of universities and non-academic partners in seven countries.

Deadline

The application call is open until February 26, 2024 (23.59 CET).

Applicants must apply through the online portal accessible via the project website: <https://codesign4transitions.eu>.

CoDesign4Transitions welcomes applications from excellent students and researchers of any age, nationality, and gender early in their careers. Applicants must fulfill all of the minimum eligibility criteria at the date of the call deadline.
